A. Between each bone in the spine there are moist, spongy discs (intervertebral disc site that act as shock absorbers. In later life these discs tend to lose water and shrink. Since there are 23 such discs in the vertebral column. Since there are 23 such discs in the vertebral column, a very slight shrinkage of each disc would cause loss of an inch or more in height. There is also a tendency for the shoulders to bend forward so that the elderly person becomes round-shouldered.

• Mental Telepathy Q. Can some people broadcast and receive thought waves? A. Scientists say that mental telepathy isn't impossible but thought transfer hasn't been proved. The brain does give off tiny electric impulses so in theory we have a sending in theory, we have a sending device. What's missing in humans is a workable receiving set. Birds and bees must have some sort of sending and receiving apparatus. Birds migrate to the same spot every year and they do it without maps, radar, compass or clock. Bees locate water in some mysterious way. To brush this off as instinct explains nothing. Still, in humans, such "supernatural" things haven't been proved. Most mental telepathy studies depend on "guessing" designs on cards. Usually there are 25 cards in the deck, with five different designs. The subject tries to identify the design on each card by "reading the mind" of a person who is looking at the card. Anyone can guess and lust by chance get five correct answers. Some people may get seven correct answers maybe these are "mind readers" but 18 wrong answers out of 25 isn't anything to write home about.

To Trade or Not to Trade

CHINA EVIDENTLY IS TAKING - the Canadian Government's offer of trade seriously. According to The Financial Post, agents of the Peiping Government have been in eastern Canadian cities lately surveying the potential markets for Chinese cotton textiles. The possibility of competition from China has horrified the Canadian textile indus-try. Will it also horrify the Canadian Government?

The Chinese are ready to sell us textiles at prices substantially lower than those asked by Canadian, British or American mills. At once we are faced with the old argument that we cannot afford to do business with countries that maintain wage standards lower than ours.

If that be true, we can do bus-iness with no nation in the world but the United States, since all others (in-Britain) maintain wage standards lower, usually much lower, than ours.

Moreover, if we are not willing to buy the only kind of goods that China can export, how do we expect to sell our goods to China? What becomes of that great drive in the Chinese market promised by the Diefenbaker Government?

Apparently not much is coming of it. A few weeks ago it was indi-cated in Ottawa that a Canadian trade mission would soon go to China, led by a cabinet minister, presumably Mr. Churchill, minister of trade and commerce. Now Mr. Churchill says he has no such plan and maybe the representatives of some other country would be better received than Canadians in China. Is yet another pre-election trade project to be quietly dropped?

would be quite logical for the Canadian Government to decide that

without buying there.
The Government evidently wishes to sell there, since it is properly protesting against the United States Government's ban on exports to China from the subsidiaries of American industries in Canada. By its own logic the Canadian Governbound to admit some goods from China and textiles are among the goods that China can offer us

The Government has shown, how-ever, in the case of British woollens that it is determined to protect the Canadian textile industry and in the case of Chinese cottons it has a ready means of protection.

Under the new anti-dumping legislation announced in Mr. Flembudget the Government can ing's budget the Government can value Chinese textiles, or any other imports, at any price it pleases for customs purposes. In other words, it can raise the tariff and levy a tax by order-in-council without consulting Parliament.

This is a vicious principle constitutionally but it can, and no doubt ill be, effective against inconvenient Chinese and other imports. Virtually all imports, of course, are inconvenient to somebody but they benefit the consumer and they are the only means (apart from the borrowing of foreign capital) of paying for our exports.

Now that the Chinese salesmen have appeared in Canada-taking our offers of trade seriously-we shall soon see whether our Governunderstands these facts, whether it really wishes to trade or

Lessons from Goldstream

THE BURNED 120 ACRES AT Goldstream have emphasized a number of points for Victorians.

Apart from revealing the tan-gible menace of a bush fire close to home, they have underscored the wisdom of water board forestry

That policy was under heavy attack a few years ago. Critics argued that the forest should be left alone, that any access roads would only increase invasion of the watershed by the public and thereby add to the fire hazard.

One of the faults of that argument resided in its refusal to consider fires caused by other than intruders on the watershed, or fires which swept into that timberland from other areas.

The blaze at Goldstream was contained—despite a severe loss—because the fire-fighters were able to cut a break, in effect a rough access road, across the path of the

Similarly, access road construction in other parts of the watershed has proceeded to the point where fire-fighters and equipment could be rushed to within a mile of occurring in the water board's hold-And the water board, by building up its facilities over recent years, has the equipment available to push emergency road construction over any specific mile to meet a fire.

This, as the Goldstream fire disclosed, is sane practice. But no provision for fighting a fire is as good as adequate provision to prevent While conditions continue as they are, prudence seems to insist forests in more hazardous localities be closed.

Spot closures, however, cannot decision of the minister. To make closure effective, boundaries for the areas concerned have to be defined. They must be set out in such a way that definitions not only stand up in court, but are understood by those members of the public, loggers or others, who go into the woods Under the vagaries of climate which occur in an area as large as the Vancouver Forest District, a district which includes Vancouver Island and a substantial part of the southwest coast mainland, closure by district is frequently not selective

There may be substantial sections of that district where access to the woods is reasonable, where rain and high humidity make fire hazard negligible. In another region of the same district, denied rains and where humidity is low, the danger may be extreme.

A blanket closure of the whole district under such circumstances may not be justified. Closure in sections of it seems essential.

To facilitate quick action-action that could be taken on the report of rangers on the spot-it appears desirable to break up the for closure purposes and to have different sections of it adequately defined in advance of the fire season. Were this to be done, were the different localities identified for legal purposes no less than for public information, spot closures should not be too difficult to enforce.

Such a system, based on watersheds, is working well in the Nelson Forest District, is under study in Kamloops and, with more complex detailed arrangements, should be applicable to the Vancouver Forest District.

ONE OF THE CHESTNUTS IN lawyers' old joke collections concerns the bright young junior partner who announced with pride to his seniors that he had cleared up in a week an estate case on which the older men had been working for

As the story goes, his announcement was received in shocked silence until one of the seniors explained; "Son, that was turned over to you as a perpetual annuity."

Which may have nothing at all to do with Premier Bennett's statement that Victoria's new courthouse "might not be far away," and his refusal to announce a date on which work would start. But then, nobody seems to know when the next provincial election is going to be called,

LOOSE ENDS

Success in the Long, Slow Climb to the Top Drawer

PROFESSOR LOWER, the great national historian, is about to publish social history which-according to ad extracts in Maclean's Magazine concludes in general that Canadians are second-rate sort of people. Already the professor has received crushing rejoinder, some enterprising and patriotic publishers in publish a Social Register which will prove that some thousands of Canadians at least are truly first-rate. In that slow social evolution recorded in Mr. Lower's book we have at Hutchison last reached the ultimate point of achievement. We have achieved a Society, true line of Blue Blood, an established and recognizable Aristocracy.

THIS is not an easy thing to do. I has taken us more than three cen-turies and it is costing a lot of money. According to Maclean's account of the new Social Register, no one, however rich, can buy his way into this catalogue of pedigrees.

Many ambitious Canadians sought to and offered substantial fees for the privilege, but were rejected. They had money but no pedigree. They might have fumbled the problem of aristocracy on political campaign funds was extreme by useful citizens but they were not for years.

the Canadian equivalent of Burke's Peerage but they were required to pay a fee of $25 for this privilege. A small fee indeed. One marvels at the publishers' Surely it should be worth more than

The real aristocrats were welcomed to $25, it might be worth even $29.50 (as they say in the advertisements of the department stores' weekend sales) to find oneself enshrined in Society. No real aristocrat will quibble about a dollar or two, or even three, in a matter of such importance.

THE aristocrats evidently are not quibbling. Thousands of them have gladly paid the admission price of $25, assuring the publishers of the Register a large profit.

But the profit, we may be sure, is purely coincidental. The real and un-selfish purpose of this publication is to distinguish the first-rate from the swarming second-rate mass of Canadians, to eparate the top drawer from the bottom in short, to establish our aristocracy on a permanent, indisputable and official

It was about time. In Canada we

We were getting along quite well in the early days when a few eminent Canadians were granted titles of nobility for great public services in some cases like that of Macdonald and Laurier, and in other cases for great contributions to political campaign funds. THEN a new generation of radical,

Sans-cullotic, egalitarian Liberals somehow got hold of the country and abolished titles. This was a great blow to Society, but it began to recover under the Conservative Government of the late Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, who granted a few titles only to find that the Cana-dian people were not quite ready for them. They had not yet reached a suf-ficient stage of social evolution. Consequently, when the Liberals re turned in 1935 they lowered the guillo-tine on our embryonic peerage as other revolutionaries had lowered it in France long ago. The new aristocracy was ex-tinguished in the bloom of its youth.

THAT, as everyone agrees, was a tragic mistake. At the very moment when Canada's boom had made it the most privileged nation on earth, it could not erect a privileged class. And the effect

But nothing, not even the revolutionary genius of the late William Lyon Mackenzie King, could long suppress Canada's natural and sound yearning for an established aristocracy.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Where government failled, private en-terprise has rushed into the breech and saved the nation. The true Register and book of pedigrees is about to roll off the press, recording those Canadian families of the unquestionable top drawer who, on the rough frontier a century or two ago, often lacked the more fa miliar bottom drawers.

TT has taken us an unconscionably long I time but we now have a legitimate ambition for the young, a shiny mark to shoot at, an adequate reward for a distinguished life. Every Canadian boy or girl can hope to end in the Register and thus separate himself or herself by an impassable gulf from the rude herd of the second-rate. All you need is $25 and the right ancestors.

Canadian, even an aristocrat on the old-age pension, can raise $25. you raise a family tree I am not quite sure. Anyway, despite a business recession, we are evidently entering a big boom, probably a wild inflation, in an-

No Welcome for Neighbors in the Dog Days

IN the lives of even the most res ful boys there are days when there seems just nothing to do and distracted mothers cudgel their brains for suggestions that are usually met with pitying scorn. I suppose that is as true today as it was in the first decade of this great century when I was growing up in Victoria. Such days came in August and they were came in almost invariably, dull, hot and hazy. Grass had turned a crisp, dry brown and it scrunched under our feet and felt bristly to our callussed bare soles. Dust lay heavy on the listless

Only yellow transparent apples and a few Gravensteins were ripe and, worst of all, summer was simply racing along at break-neck speed toward the end of the holidays and the start of the autumn school term.

They were the dog-days (which I understand are supposed to occur about the time of the heliacal rising of one or quite well be true).

Certainly these were the most difficult days of the year and their sultriness appeared to communicate itself to hes appeared to communicate itself to the receptiveness of youngsters so that fights flamed up on the smallest provo-cation—and died just as fast—as we prowled the neighborhood in search of some sort of diversion, scuffing bare toes in the warm dust and taking idle pot-shots at stray cats with our sling-

Now every neighborhood had certain houses that seemed to be almost per-ennially empty, or rather seemed to be tenanted for only short periods so that a succession of transient folk who temporarily occupied them left no impact from

If, by some wonderful chance, such a house had been the scene of a tragedy it soon became enveloped in a legend. In our neighborhood there were two or three such houses. In one a poor negro had been murdered and of course it became "haunted", and we gave it wide mark in passing that way after dusk.

It was on one of the most trying of the dog-days that we probed this house with the faint hope that it might lead to an adventure because we knew very well that there were "mighty strange doings" in it around midnight at certain phases of the moon, although our certainty was without the slightest proof. However, if worst came to worst, the plum tree at the side of the house might have a few ripe egg plums on it.

Well, as we stamped on the porch this was a ritual, the reason for which I have entirely forgotten—a team of heavy draft horses came along with a wagonload of furniture, topped by three ungsters whose popping eyes showed they were utter strangers.

We scurried off the porch just as the driver cut the team around and backed right to the sidewalk across from the front gate.

In a moment we sloughed off the last vestige of boredom and set out to criti-cize the furniture and to stare at the three little new neighbors so suddenly thrust upon us. If this were a proper would tell how we made the strangers welcome; how we aided them nd proffered our friendship.

We did nothing of the sort. Instead we stared stoney-eyed with curiosity and faint hostility at the hapless newcomers and I must say, except for the youngest of the trio, a little girl of about five, the boys gave us stare for stare.

So we started punching each other around just to show the strangers that we weren't afraid of them and all the time we secretly sized them up to see who could lick who, because a fightif our sort of fighting could be so dignified-was inevitable sooner or later.

"Hey, are you new kids?" I asked the oldest, a stocky and square-built boy with straw-colored hair cut round his head as though his mother had done it with the kitchen scissors and a bowl, which was probably true. He didn't answer what was obviously what we thought a sullen look but what I think was simply an expression of supreme unhappiness at being suddenly transplanted at the whim of grown-ups in a new and hostile land. We yelled at other boys coming to see a silly question, but just stared back with who the newcomers were: "Come on over and see the new kids."

Soon we were a little crowd staring at the lonely-looking strange children. "Where'ja come from?" one of our gang asked. "Mannnyberries," answered while her brothers remained glumly silent. "Mannyberries, Mannyberries, Manny-

"Gosh what a crazy name. Manny-berries, Mannyberries. Gee whizz, that's

A MISTAKE TO LOOK AT THE FACTS?

So Much for the Sacred Guardians of Tradition

M.R. FORBES' diatribe (published on this page last Saturday) puts me in a difficult position. I know that nothing say will ever convince him, so it seems a waste of time to direct attention to the gaping holes in his argument. If you are a fanatical sup-porter of Mr. Forbes you will be just as deaf to reason as he is; if you know any-thing about painting or music or literature—or plain logical argument you don't need me to point out his bumbling follies; and if you are not interested in the arts at all, you are probably not reading this anyway — so why should I bother?

I will, though, because if I don't some pinhead is sure to imagine that I am powerless to reply to Mr. Forbes's relentless logic. The fact is, as I said before, that we have heard the Forbes theme song a hundred times before.

To support his ramshackle mixture of vituperation and namedropping he appeals to Harry Truman, that eminent life." All walks, that is, except that have anything to do with art.

gallery or art school anywhere in the world. If you are sufficiently paranoid you can explain this away as a gigantic conspiracy against decency and reason, but there are other explanations which ace less strain on one's credulity.

Mr. Forbes quotes Degas on Cezanne Let me quote Degas on the Academy Degas to Sickert, in French: "What would the Academy do if I sent them these? (pointing to some canvases in his studio)." Sickert to Degas, in rich argot: "They'd show you the door. So much for the sacred guardians of Tradition, who have made themselves a complete laughing-stock by their antics

Does Mr. Forbes know that Picasso,

Mr. Forbes and his fellow frock-coats seem to think that there is no criticism or self-criticism among contemporary artists. This is utter nonsense. Excellent criticism appears in periodicals like the "The Listener" and others; and it is read carefully by the "superintellectuals" to which Forbes refers. The difference between this criticism and Forbes's delirious attacks is that the former is informed criticism.

The best criticism of Picasso that I know is contained in Michael Ayrton's Golden Sections"; and the best reply to it is by the same man in the same

The most searching criticism of con-temporary art is to be found in Wyndham 's "The Demon of Progress in the Both of these books are in every public library; both of these writers are painters as professional as Forbes and a nillion times as good. When Berenson speaks about Cezanne I listen hard, because this man, aged 93, undoubtedly possesses more skull-furni-ture on the subject of art than any man live. He defines his terms; he is aware as Forbes, God help us, is not—that Reality is not just another name for natural appearances; his judgments of modern art are based on an unrivalled firsthand knowledge of the great paint-

Mr. Forbes, on the other hand, has Mr. Forces, on the other hand, has spent forty years concentrating on the "How" of painting, without ever once asking himself about the "Why." Now he finds that the trade he has mastered is no longer in great demand, so he takes after the competitors who are driving him and his kind out of tusiness. By implication he accuses the Governo General of being a dupe, and Allan Jarvis of being a fraud.

His utterances are so wild and woolly, so reminiscent of the flat-earthist, the nature-healer, the religious crank and the Baconian, that it is difficult to keep one's patience. But we should be sorry for him. He and his kidney are following the feudal baron, the brontosaurus, and the two-bit shave and haircut on the long journey toward oblivion. I have not Mr. Forbes's impressive genealogical and professional qualifica tions, but I was trained first as a lawyer and then as an historian, so I do know a little about evidence. I have taken twenty years to put myself into possession of a number of facts about art in general and modern art in particular, and my opinions, for what they are worth, are based on these facts.

Perhaps I made the mistake of looking at all the facts. Perhaps I should, like Mr. Forbes, have made up my mind first, and waved the facts away afterwards.

The Tortious Trout

CHIMNEY LAKE, B.C. - "You should have been here last week" is a gambit one usually associates with a Victorian explaining his garden to an Outsider. Up here in the Cariboo the locals make just as much use of it; only it is fishing, not gardens. Cariboo gardens are serious af-fairs, surrounded by high fences to keep out the cattle, moose, deer and what have you, and nothing so flippant as phlox or petunia is to be seen. The gar-dens are there, and they keep with corn and turnips, and there's an end on't. So it is trout which was better last week.

And not just here. Wherever there is water enough for good old salmo Gairdneri Kamloops (or as he used to be much more appropriately known, salmo Irideus), one finds that fishing is just a bit slow at present. Last week it was terrific, and next week, no doubt, it will be picking up. But right now . . . well, you might try a gang troll and a worm. There are worms to be had, it is thought, at a sporting goods shop in Williams Lake; if you really like that sort of thing.

This column cannot say that it does. It is not usually so hungry that it must descend to such prosaic methods of capturing trout. It is here for sport; and winding in an exhausted fish gagged by a yard of heavy hardware and for the moment it is the excellent chuckwagon dinners of Mr. Burns and periodically driving away little knots of curious range cattle. By and large, it is a satisfactory sort of life, even alien sound, to say the least.

Not that it is the only sound. For the last 12 hours two bulls have been noisily disputing the leadership of the local herd. During the hot time of the day they are fairly quiet, but around sundown the bellowing becomes energetic, and the camp has a stand-to. Grumpy range bulls are not the most charming of bed fellows sentries armed with dishpans and sticks, car-horns and other weapons must be

In the morning there are crows. They flap about in their ungainly way, and the loons in the water laugh at them. And then there are woodpeckers, a large variety I have not been able to identify. They greet the day by machine-gunning the tree behind my tent, and swearing at each other between bursts. Sparrows and creepers, and the odd bluebird, chit-ter encouraging at them. There is a pine squirrel sitting on a rock a couple of yards from where I am. He is stuffing himself with crumbs left for him by the children. Buses Lose Money LONDON-At random

Aftermath of the bus strike-fewer people are now using London's buses. Exact figures for the two weeks following the strike are not yet available but London Transport say they know that they are well down. Explanation: people made other arrangements during the strike (walking; using the tubes, buying a bicycle, etc) and the seven weeks it lasted were enough to make them change their travelling habits permanently. Pre-strike figures: eight

Sid Caesar is licking his Reyburn Sid Caesar is licking his wounds after a lukewarm reception by press and public for the first of his series of 13 half-hour programs, for which BBC-TV have paid $135,000. Many viewers couldn't wait until the end of the program to phone the BBC to tell them the money had been wasted.

Query which you can answer better than I: Is Caesar's coming to England another example of a star slipping from the big time in the U.S. and cashing in here on his trans-Atlantic reputation?

Footnote to the mention I made the other day of the new greyhound racing sensation Pigalle Wonder: Owner of the dog is Al Burnette, who also owns three night clubs, one of which is the Pigalle. Recently his wife told him that he was becoming so obsessed with this record-breaking greyhound that either she or the dog would have to go.

Story going the rounds: An African chieftain was making his first trip outside his country. On the plane bound for London the hostess offered him the lunch menu. He scanned it and shook his head, "I don't see anything I like," he said. "Maybe I see the passenger list?"

Canada has hit England with a three-book canada has nit England with a three-books barrage all in one week. The three books: William Kilbourn's life of William Lyon Mackenzle, Sydney Jackman's life of Sir Francis Bond Head, Bruce Hutchison's "Canada, Tomorrow's Giant."

The Daily Telegraph lumps them together in a long, glowing review, summing up the two biographies as "fascinating" and Hutchison's book as "revealing and exciting."

Proof, if any were needed, that this summer is a washout: As the visiting New Zealanders have day after day of cricket cancelled because of rain, they are keeping fit with constant practice—at football.

Their manager has made the best of the wet summer cracks that are heard all the time these days. On arrival at one ground to play a match he surveyed the pitch and asked: "Where are the diving boards?"

"Pajama Game," etc.

Searching for a tenth, to replace the flopping "Bells Are Ringing," they can't yet find one on Broadway or vicinity. While they're waiting they're going to fill in with that tired old standby, "The Merry Widow."

BOOK TALK By JAMES SCOTT

Memoir of O'Neill Is Shallow Stuff

I have just put down a memoir of Eugene O'Neill, perhaps the most distinguished playwright the New World has yet produced, written by Agnes Boulton, who is generally regarded as his first wife. (Actually, O'Neill, 21, had in an exuberant moment before he was quite 21, had In an exuberant moment before he was quite 21, had married and had a son by his mate although they never lived together. As the story is recalled, the pair slipped over to Jersey at the end of a hilarious party and got married as a lark. Both families were horrified and opposed and the marriage was soon dissolved. But the child did arrive and was brought up as the son of another man when the circle quickly married. whom the girl quickly married.)

Agnes Boulton, however, was properly married to O'Neill and lived with him for a decade, bearing two of his children (this time recognized as his) and sharing with him what was, perhaps, one of his most fully productive periods—the time which saw him winning his first Puffizer Prize for Beyond the Horkson, the writing of Anna. for Beyond the Horizon, the writing of Anna Christie and The Emperor Jones. The book which I have just finished is called Part of a Long Story which suggests that the author has every intention of spinning out the tale of her years with O'Neill to the limit. This book covers only a couple of years, from her first meeting to the birth of

Canadian Ar' Canadian Ar' Canadian Ar' Canadian Ar' Canadian Artists Matched Imports

Hats off to the first annual Vancouver International Festival of the Arts, just completed after four weeks of feverish, successful, and expensive activity. The Festival, from the very first, enjoyed a complete absence of timidity on the part of its planners. It was conceived and ex-ecuted on a broad, bold scale; it was as good a thing as ever happened in and to British Columbia, though its

as ever nappened in and to British Columbia, though its chief beneficiary was the city of Vancouver.

No thought had ever been given to the compromise of artistic standard; the planners openly intended this Vancouver Festival to be on a par with Salzburg and Edinburgh; what a courageous act of faith on their part, therefore, for them to have decided to rely largely on Canadian talent, which proved that it can hold its own with any.

proved that it can hold its own with any. The artists who were imported from other countries certainly warranted the expense. To say that they held their own with the Cana-dian artists is to praise them highly, even if their equivalents could have been found their equivalents could have been found among other Canadians who, this year, at least, did not take part.

At least two "imports," however, were fireplaceable, and without them the Festival would not have been the same; they were the one and only Bruno Walter, and the sensational Norwegian soprano, Ingrid Bjoner.

Two Canadians of world standard who were conspicuously missing were Sir Ernest MacMillan and Zara Nelsova, who would be an ornament to any Festival anywhere.

The prime objective of the Festival, however, was not so much to be a showcase of Canadian talent; rather, it was meant to be a Festival of the Arts on a very high level.

In that, it succeeded signally. Imagination and high intelligence were displayed by the Festival's Artistic and Managing Director. Nicholas Goldschmidt, and by Peter Bennett, executive director.

Let us only hope that means can be found, with regard to Using this design, see if you can place the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 around the circle so that the sum of the numbers in any two adjacent spoke-segments of the wheel equals the sum of the two numbers diagonally opposite. All ten numbers stated must be inserted; each but once. Can you meet the challenge?

Smith, Brown, Jones and Williams had dinner together the other night. When they parted, each of them, by mistake, was wearing the hat belonging to one other member of the party and the coat belonging to another. The man who took Williams' hat took Jones' coat. The hat taken by Jones belonged to the owner of the coat taken by Williams. Smith took Brown's hat.

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI)-Satchel Paige's latest escapade with the Miami Marlins ended the same way today of all his escapades do-on a happy, all-isforgiven note.

The Marlins announced the famed pitcher's reinstatement with the club following a 10-day sus-pension for "utter disregard for the rules of club." Paige said the club owed him money and he felt so strongly about it that he left the team in Montreal and said he was going to catch a plane for Miami. He was intercepted at the airport, however, and persuaded to return to the team's quarters.

Even if they had miraculously recovered the spirit and co hesion that had eluded them through the season and squeezed past Naneimo into the Inter-City Lacrosse League playoffs, this had to be the last season for the Victoria Shamrocks as we have known them for the past much of the greatness that had made the Irish the outstanding lacrosse team in Can-ada over the previous three years had evaporated. GEORDIE JOHNSTON coach Whitey Severson had been able to bring up some of Victoria's best juniors on a full-time basis. But the Junior Shamrocks are pointing for a Minto Cup crown this year and the youngsters wouldn't stay around Ung enough. They didn't want to lose their junior eligibility.

Without tough competition for regular places, some of the veterans appeared satisfied to coast through the season. The Shamrocks became the Los Angeles Dodgers of the Inter-City League and the club that was touted to battle New Westminster for first place was creaking at the joints and struggling vainly to squeeze into playoffs. Age alone was not responsible for wearing out a great machine before its time. Complacency and dissatisfaction must also share the blame.

And what about next year?

In the past, the Rocks have operated successfully by retaining the bulk of their players, adding an import or two and giving a few younger players a chance to break into the line-up. Then about mid-season, a couple of veterans have been brought back into the fold for playoff insurance.

Would Be Foundation With a Future

While bringing older stars back into action late in the while bringing older sais back in the arm, the effect season often provided a temporary shot in the arm, the effect was not always a lasting one and resentment of those shunted down to the reserve corps often appeared to erase any advantage gained by the shuffle.

The practice has also given the Rocks a reputation of having a clique of old pals within the club.

On what we have seen this season, the Irish foundation is too shaky to support the usual type of building in 1959.

We can't take anything away from the old Shamrocks.

They were great. And it must be admitted that it took some tough breaks to keep this year's edition out of playffs for the first time in the club's history. However, the skid from Canadian boxla kings to also rans is handwriting on the wall and it looks like a good time to use the Junior Shamrocks—who may be the best junior club in Canada this season—as a founda-tion for Victoria's Inter-City League entry.

They would be a foundation with a future. They wouldn't be expected to collect a Mann Cup the first year, but the Irish might be flying high again in 1960.

They'll Want Geordie Back in Goal

Since only about six or seven juniors would be ready for the tougher senior loop, there would be plenty of room for willing veterans to earn places on the team and provide the

At least eight of the current Shamrocks still have the ability to come up with big seasons next year.

Certainly no one in sight is going to chase Geordie John ston out of the Irish goal.

Operating behind a shaky defence, Geordie was the best goaltender in the circuit and did more than any other player to keep the Rocks in the running. The fans showed their appreciation when they voted Johnston the most popular player on the Victoria club. They'll want a new deal next year and a new spirit and they'll want Geordie back in goal. Victoria is proud of its Shamrocks and the club's record of four western Canada titles and two Mann Cup championships in the past six years. They can forget one unhappy season. But they might not stay around for another.

Long Career Appears Over

Jockey Alex Haller; one of the best-known riders in the Pacific Northwest, may have reached the end of a career that spanned 23 years as a result of his indefinite sus-pension by stewards at Vanouver's Exhibition Park.

Presiding steward Wilson Dunn found Thursday that Alex Haller used an electrical device to stimulate his mount — Lord Glenlivet — in the first race. The mount, a 20-to-1 shot, won the race in a three-way photo-finish, but was later disqualified and placed last. Mr. Dunn said a small palm-sized battery known as a "joint" was found in Haller's posession immediately after the race. This type of battery is used to excite or frighten a horse into extending itself.

Haller, 39, has been a jockey for 23 years. He lost his licence for eight years in Vancouver shortly after the Second World War for an undisclosed offence.

Haler, many experts claimed, possessed the poten-tial to become one of the best jockeys in North America. He was the leading rider in B.C.

Haller's B.C. licence was reinstated three years ago. John of Syracuse, N.Y., lette of Winnipeg St. Charles.

THE SCOREBOARD Harry Grayson

NEW YORK (NEA)-Floyd Patterson came out of a clinch and moved as he always does, in an arc around his opponent, gloves held high and close to his face, his body bent in a semicrouch. He got off a left hook and it rocked the other guy and a couple of punches later the fight was finished. Cus D'Amato was standing in the back of smoky Sunnyside Garden, a small New York fight club. It was steaming, but he kept on his overcoat. His only concession to room temperature was to hold his homburg hat in his hand as if it were the rent, instead of wearing it. Even then-this was a night in 1952 and Patterson was on an amateur card-Cus was different.

"Was that," somebody asked him, "your fighter?"
D'Amato nodded.

You got it made. I mean he is going to be a big one

"I don't know whether I got it made," D'Amato answered, "but I know he is going to be the best fighter alive."

A promoter named Bill Rosensohn depends on Patterson to bring enough people to see him fight Roy Harris for the heavy-weight championship at Los Angeles' Wrigley Field Monday night. And in New York, a burly, soft-spoken television expert, Irving Kahn, has an entire network of theatres and equipment and people hanging on the hope a Patterson title match will bring people into theatres.

But D'Amato is one who has never changed. He is still the an who keeps on his overcoat. In fact, when it comes to such simple things as sleep, all Cus does is slip a magazine under his head on the couch in his office and cork off for perhaps three hours a night.

And in obstinately bucking the established boxing business run by the International Boxing Club, D'Amato has as much to lose as anybody else connected with this show.

Criticism has come naturally to D'Amato, even when he is on the right track. When he makes a mistake the roof comes in on him. And if this title show turns into a loser, or anything resembling it, or if Patterson does not show to advantage, then they'll try to bury Cus.

His big danger is in the fighter. Boxing people have felt right along that D'Amato was taking a big gamble by carrying

"Let a fighter get his mind mixed up," they tell you, "and all of a sudden you don't have as much fighter any more."

And when some reports from the coast indicated Patterson was not all he should be, it was I-told-you-so day on Broadway. One thing, however, is dead certain. Patterson's drawing power has been hurt, not heiped, in the past two years. How much it will reflect in the box office for the Harris fight is a question. And they'll make D'Amato responsible

Lincoln Wrong?

CAMPBELL RIVER COUR-IER-Lincoln once said, "You can fool all of the people some of the time, some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

It seems to us that our B.C. government is trying to prove Lincoln was wrong

Our provincial mining laws, for instance, have created a great hardship on the mining business of our province, mines have closed down and thrown thousands out of em-

Laws have been enacted that have been greatly responsible for unemployment, especially in the 'umber and mining industries. Labor as a whole has been unfairly dealt with and it is the actions of this government which have caused, to a great extent, labor unrest
The individual has been taxed to the limit by re-assessment of property and the blame placed on municipal government. Cabinet ministers are away from their offices for six and seven weeks at a time and urgent business is left to subordinates who do not have the power to act.

Urgent appeals for response to letters receive a secretarial reply to the effect that "the minister is away" and let-ters otherwise are left unanswered, or a reply is re-ceived too late for action.

COMOX FREE PRESS -During a recent meeting be-tween the Vancouver Island Dairymen's Association and the Milk Board, Mr. Carr, chairman of the Milk Board, admitted that the removal of the differential on milk produced on Vancouver Island had taken away part of the livelihood of dairy farmers north of the Malahat.

We understand that the differential was removed in the first place so that Vancou-ver Island milk could maintain a competitive position with milk coming from the mainland. However, it should be remembered that the deci-sion to remove the differential was based on economic theory which in the light of experience may prove to be non-effective in maintaining the competitive position of Island producers.

Taking anyone's livelihood away to test an economic theory is rather rough treat-ment. In any event we doubt that artificial controls can be usefully injected into 'the dairy industry which is '100 per cent free enterprise at the producer level, but is saddled with controls, quotas, formulas and regulations in bringing its product to the

A milk board faced with the problem of bringing order out of the chaos of such a contradiction can do no better than to say, as they did say at their meeting with the Vancouver Island dairymen: We know that you have a problem but we cannot give you an answer now."

Meanwhile, dariymen north of the Malahat must be con-tent with sympathy. This will not keep them in the dairy

If the dairymen are sincere in their conviction that they can maintain their competi-tive position with the return of the differential then we say return the differential. If the milk board cannot answer the problem created by their decision this is the only honorable course. Let the chips fall where they may.

So we've been fighting it for forty-eight hours. Sweating and choking in the smoke till our eyes and lungs feel burnt out.

The paper'll talk about a million-dollar loss. But when you read it you won't see the red hell that turned big trees into living torches. You won't hear the roar of it or know the black discouragement of falling back, defeated, time after time.

What do we think about, besides our aches and pains? Well, we remember a lucky deer that raced past ... a bear and her two cubs that got away. And the scorched young trees that would have been forest some day. Then we think of the boys on the big yellow bulldozers, ramming through brush and trees and blinding smoke to cut the firebreak along the ridge. That's what finally licked it.

Last of all we think of you. Was it you who dropped the match? You, who tossed the cigarette out of the car window, or left the campfire smoldering? If it was, we wish you'd been here with us to see this

The Story of YOUR NEWSPAPER

PART I - "World News"

THE WORLD is becoming so small these days, the Casbah is down at the end of your street. Your neighbor is a resident of Peiping, Beirut or Reykjavik. You'll learn about a murder in West Berlin as quickly as you hear of one in Victoria West. Modern communications have shrunk the globe — and for most folks, without their own private sources of information, "communications" means the newspapers.

Into the newsroom of your daily paper each day pour more than 100,000 words of information.

On teletype machines on 24 - hour service come news stories from the capitals and villages of the world. A riot in Johannesburg, a new hemline in Paris, a political upheaval in Baghdad, a perfect bridge hand in Sacramento matter where it happens, if an event is likely to interest you as a newspaper read-er it is flashed along the wires and placed your doorstep through a process of teamwork in which

How is it done? How does President Adenauer's lunch-time comment on the latest Middle East development get to you in mid - afternoon? How can an overnight bombing in Tel Aviv be described in detail for you at brea

BEHIND this feat of magic lies a vast organization of men, women and technical facilities. Two main news agencies serve Victoria's daily newspapers: The Canadian Press and United Press International. The former is an association of Canadian newspapers which spends pooled funds to maintain correspondents in London and Washington, apart from its function of gathering and distributing news from all parts of Canada. By agreement, The Canadian Press receives the com-plete news report of the Associated Press, which blankets the United States and thin the bureaus and correspondents in most of the world's chief-cities. It also receives the British Reuter's report.

United Press International maintains a similar news network on this continent and around the world, gathering news and selling it to clients. And each correspondent in a large foreign centre has his "stringers" covering news in smaller communities. Thus literally thousands of trained re-porters all over the world spend their waking hours digging up information for you.

Dr. Adenauer's remarks would be phoned from the Reichstag pressroom to the agency bureau in Bonn. There they would be sent by teletype to a European news centre at London or Paris, quickly relayed across the Atlantic to New York and placed on the network of teletype circuits that cover this continent.

A teletype impulse travels with the speed of Even with relay handling en route, President Adenauer's words could arrive in local newsrooms within a matter of minutes.

TELETYPE machine is like a large electric typewriter. Each pressure of a letter key at one end of the line strikes the corresponding letter in each machine on the circuit, and the result is typed on a sheet of paper unwinding from

To speed things up, the words are usually punched on a narrow tape at the sending station as a code of five holes in various combinations. The tape runs through a transmitter which sends the impulse along the line to receiving machines at a speed of up to 70 words a minute.

The heart of a newsroom is the news desk,

and one of the key men around the "rim" of this semi-circular table is the telegraph or wire editor. He is still called this from the not-so-long-ago when his news dispatches came to him in the form of telegrams. Today he, or his assistant, merely tears off the typed items as they are tapped out on the teletype machine. No paper could begin to use all the news it receives. It is necessary to sort it, select the most interesting stories, edit and cut them if necessary, and add instructions to the printers regarding size of type and position in the paper. Most of the material received — and both of your local newspapers have two fulltime incoming machines—goes into the waste basket. What you read in the paper your editor's best estimate, based on experience, of what you will wish to read. And remember — he must keep in mind the wishes of thousands of other readers besides yourself.

Wirephoto Machine WITH the news item selected and edited down W to size, either the telegraph editor or another deskman writes a "head" for it. That is the largesize black type that precedes the piece, sums up what the story is about, and sets it off from other items on the page. The news editor will decide if the importance of the dispatch wins it a place on "the front" or inside. Then the "copy" placed in a pneumatic tube and shot down to the composing room to be set into lead type.

A telegraph editor's job is not an easy one and obviously not one for a man without a good background of news work in reporting and edit-ing. He must know what is going on in a score of places throughout the world, understand the relative importance of each happening not only to the world but to his own readers, and be able to cut down thousands of words into hundreds without losing the meaning of the event in ques-

Added to all this, he must do it often with only seconds to spare for each task; and some-times, on a deadline—which is the last moment at which he can send copy down to the composing room—throw out half the work he has done and make over the whole front page to include some important new happening.

TO THE marvels of modern teletype communication have recently been added an even more spectacular marvel. Wire photo machines of various kinds can now send pictures by leased wire as quickly as the words which describe them. Within eight minutes a photograph eight inches by twelve can be transmitted from New York to Victoria and way points. A Montreal plane crash, a Chicago fire, a Washington presentation, the opening of Parliament at Ottawa—all can be in your local paper in little more than an hour.

Mechanical wizardry, speed, and nerves of steel—these are some of the qualities that go into your daily newspaper; these, and the work of thousands of pairs of hands and eyes dedicated to bringing Italy, Pakistan or Ghana as close as your back yard and giving you next door neighyour back yard, and giving you next-door neighbors in Santiago, Bucharest or New Delhi. It all costs money—a lot of money. But a good paper takes a pride in giving its readers the latest and the best.

(This is the first in a series of articles published by Victoria Press Ltd. to describe the operation of a modern newspaper.)

Cuttings in Pliofilm Bag Give Excellent Results

As long as there is a plastic bag in the house, the home gardener can attain good results in rooting a few cuttings of some favorite shrub or house plant.

Progress, progress, ever progress.

The latest evidence of progress is presented by the B.C. Telephone Company, which will, on Sept. 28, present the citizens of the Greater Victoria area with not one, but two, additional digits to dial when they (the citizens) wish to arrange telephonic communications with other citizens. You are no doubt aware of the basic facts behind the

B.C. Telephone Company's contribution to progress.

As of Sept. 28, all Victoria telephone numbers now beginning with the digits 2, 3, 4, or 5, will no longer begin with these digits.

Instead, they will begin with the initials "E V." followed by the digits 2, 3, 4, or 5, as the case may be, which in turn will be followed by the OTHER digits in the pres-

One of the great merits of this progressive move is, it removes the danger of the index finger on the right hand coming extinct through disuse.

I have already figured out that, on the basis of my normal number of daily telephone calls, the index finger on my right hand will get so much exercise it will be able to one-finger the minute waltz in 30 seconds.

I can only hope that progress will continue, and that the B.C. Telephone Company will not stop at prefixing the initials "E V" before our present telephone numbers.

I look forward to the day when we will be permitted to dial, not the abbreviation for "Evergreen," but the full

he dropped me off at the ferry which goes across to Penang, and with another grin, departed. The island, intensely green against the blue of the sea, looked slightly like Hong Kong. A lone junk creaked its way towards Bay of Bengal between freighters anchored out in the het sun. The wash from the ferry caused a man on the junk to turn and idly watch us pass. I was glad to reach the island for I felt unwell and so at once found a place to stay.

Beauty and utility combine in sculptural effects for the "new shapes" with abstract and semi-abstract murals gracing both exteriors and interiors.

Shining metal is the main building material, although there appears to be a renaissance in the use of wood. Glass has lost out to new plastics.

But it is unfortunate that the many pavillons are so close to gether. The new architectural forms, while successful when seen individually, often conflict with each other.

Perhaps the most popular pavillon is the circular structure. The U.S. edifice is the most spectacular example.

Mo Chairs

The effect is jarring, but highly original.

Actually, three days at the fair is scarcely long enough to see all. It would require weeks, but a scarcely long enough to see all. It would require weeks the summit of technological progress. A golden skylight in the roof lets the sun shine through upon a round pool of water in the building's interior. Guests relax in modern chairs on a "sun deck," licking giant American ice cream cones.

No Chairs

The tone of such comparsions is unpleasant.

For example: "Capitalist America took 150 years to reach the summit of technological progress. We have done so in 40 years, one hand working.

Canada can be proud of its pavilien. The dominant colors to keep thieves out but gave you the impression of being is unpleasant

I could not take it any longer; so got out of bed, put on the pack and walked out onto the street. A car drew up and someone said "Hello, Canada, Where're you off to?"

Luxury Liner

It was an English sea captain. He took me to the Mariners' Club, which was fitted out like a luxury liner, put me up for the night and in the morning the fever was

That day I met a young Ma layan boy, who asked me if I would like to drive around the island. He and his wife came for me the following morning early when the rising sun was making the sky into those colors only seen in the tropics. We passed Malayan village along the shoreline, their fish ermen paddling long canoes out to sea and children playing and dogs running out to bark at the car. For breakfast we stopped at a hotel on the beach where palms bent out over the yellow sand as though in awe of the restless

From Penang I took the train to Bangkok. I was ad-vised against hitch-hiking. It is unpleasant to walk along a road where the jungle is a green wall on either side and to realize that in it some man may be lining you up in his

But the train was agoniz ingly slow. There is not much to do on one except sit there and think or watch the jungle moving past and when the night comes try to sleep with your head on the pack. At each station the train's stopping wakes you up and you watch others getting our while outside your window watch others getting off; some vendor is calling out in a strange language for you to buy rice wrapped in leaves, or fruit that the flies have been crawling over and you wish

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - Lunar zero hour the most auspicious moment for man's first tentative strike at the noon-moved closer today with the air force still silent as to its launching plans.

The moon rocket, a three-stage Thor-Vanguard composite never before test flown, was at the missile test centre here. It is more than 100 feet tall.

It was well shrouded, however, in the launching tower-familiar for its use in the Thormissile firings—that houses it.

The maximum goal of the test is to orbit an instrumented satellite of under 100 pounds around the moon and obtain a crude television picture of its eternally hidden "dark side."

Informed sources have noted that Sunday is the best day for such a test. If the rocketeers cannot get it off then, they have the next three days when the moon still is relatively close to earth—within 230,000 miles.

Only a short period of each day will provide a celestial alignment favorable for shooting and the whole thing could be called off for another month.

A promoter named Bill Rosensohn depends on Patterson to A promoter named Bill Rosensonn depends on Patterson to bring enough people to see him fight Roy Harris for the heavy-weight championship at Los Angeles' Wrigley Field Mon-day night. And in New York, a burly, soft-spoken television expert, Irving Kahn, has an entire network of theatres and equipment and people hanging on the hope a Patterson title

And in obstinately bucking the established boxing business as run by the International Boxing Club, D'Amato has as much

His big danger is in the fighter. Boxing people have felt right along that D'Amato was taking a big gamble by carrying

And when some reports from the coast indicated Patterson was not all he should be, it was I-told-you-so day on Broadway. One thing, however, is dead certain. Patterson's drawing wer has been hurt, not helped, in the past two years. How much it will reflect in the box office for the Harris fight is a question. And they'll make D'Amato responsible for the

PART I - "World News"

THE WORLD is becoming so small these days, 1 the Casbah is down at the end of your street. Your neighbor is a resident of Peiping, Beirut or Reykjavik. You'll learn about a murder in West Berlin as quickly as you hear of one in Victoria West. Modern communications have shrunk the globe — and for most folks, without their own private sources of information, "communications" means the newspapers.

Into the newsroom of your daily paper each day pour more than 100,000 words of information.

On teletype machines on 24 - hour service come news stories from the capitals and villages of the world. A riot in Johannesburg, a new hemline in Paris, a political upheaval in Baghdad, perfect bridge hand in Sacramento - no matter where it nappens, if an event is likely to interest you as a newspaper reader it is flashed along the wires and placed on your doorstep through a process of teamwork in which every second counts.

How is it done? How does President Adenauer's lunch-time comment on the latest Middle East development get to you in mid - afternoon? How can an overnight bombing in Tel Aviv be described in detail for you at breakfast?

BEHIND this feat of magic lies a vast organization of men, women and technical facilities. Two main news agencies serve Victoria's daily newspapers: The Canadian Press and United Press International. The former is an association of Canadian newspapers which spends pooled funds to maintain correspondents in London and Washington, apart from its function of gathering and distributing news from all parts of Canada. By agreement, The Canadian Press receives the complete news report of the Associated Press, which blankets the United States and maintains bureaus and correspondents in most of the world's chief cities. It also receives the British Reuter's report.

United Press International maintains a similar news network on this continent and around the world, gathering news and selling it to clients. And each correspondent in a large foreign centre has his "stringers" covering news in smaller com-munities. Thus literally thousands of trained reporters all over the world spend their waking hours digging up information for you.

Dr. Adenauer's remarks would be phoned from the Reichstag pressroom to the agency bureau in Bonn. There they would be sent by teletype to a European news centre at London or Paris, quickly relayed across the Atlantic to New York and placed on the network of teletype cir-cuits that cover this continent.

A teletype impulse travels with the speed of Even with relay handling en route, President Adenauer's words could arrive in local news-rooms within a matter of minutes,

TELETYPE machine is like a large electric A typewriter. Each pressure of a letter key at one end of the line strikes the corresponding letter in each machine on the circuit, and the result is typed on a sheet of paper unwinding from

To speed things up, the words are usually punched on a narrow tape at the sending station as a code of five holes in various combinations. The tape runs through a transmitter which sends

the impulse along the line to receiving machines at a speed of up to 70 words a minute.

The heart of a newsroom is the news desk,

and one of the key men around the "rim" of this semi-circular table is the telegraph or wire editor. He is still called this from the not-so-long-ago days when his news dispatches came to him in the form of telegrams. Today he, or his assistant, merely tears off the typed items as they are tapped out on the teletype machine.

No paper could begin to use all the news it receives. It is necessary to sort it, select the most interesting stories, edit and cut them if necessary, and add instructions to the printers regarding size of type and position in the paper. Most of the material received — and both of your local newspapers have two fulltime incoming machines—goes into the waste basket. What vou read in the paper is your editor's best estimate, based on experience, of what you will wish to read. And remember - he must keep in mind the wishes of thousands of other readers besides yourself.

WITH the news item selected and edited down w to size, either the telegraph editor or another deskman writes a "head" for it. That is the largesize black type that precedes the piece, sums up what the story is about, and sets it off from other items on the page. The news editor will decide if the importance of the dispatch wins it a place on "the front" or inside. Then the "copy is placed in a pneumatic tube and shot down to the composing room to be set into lead type.

A telegraph editor's job is not an easy one, and obviously not one for a man without a good background of news work in reporting and edit-ing. He must know what is going on in a score places throughout the world, understand the relative importance of each happening not only to the world but to his own readers, and be able to cut down thousands of words into hundreds without losing the meaning of the event in ques-

Added to all this, he must do it often with only seconds to spare for each task; and sometimes, on a deadline—which is the last moment at which he can send copy down to the composing room—throw out half the work he has done and make over the whole front page to include some important new happening.

The Story of YOUR NEWSPAPER

PART I - "World News"

THE WORLD is becoming so state.

The Casbah is down at the end of your street. "HE WORLD is becoming so small these days, Your neighbor is a resident of Peiping, Beirut or Reykjavik. You'll learn about a murder in West Berlin as quickly as you hear of one in Victoria West. Modern communications have shrunk the globe — and for most folks, without their own private sources of information, "communications" means the newspapers.

Into the newsroom of your daily paper each day pour more than 100,000 words of information.

On teletype machines on 24 - hour service come news stories from the capitals and villages of the world. riot in Johannesburg, a new hemline in Paris, a political upheaval in Baghdad, a perfect bridge hand in Sacramento - no matter where it happens, if an event is likely to interest you as a newspaper reader it is flashed along the wires and placed on your doorstep through a process of teamwork in which every second counts.

How is it done? How does President Adenauer's lunch-time comment on the latest Middle East development get to you in mid-afternoon? How can an overnight bombing in Tel Aviv be described in detail for you at breakfast!

BEHIND this feat of magic lies a vast organization of men, women and technical facilities. Two main news agencies serve Victoria's daily newspapers: The Canadian Press and United Press International. The former is an association of Canadian newspapers which spends pooled funds to maintain correspondents in London and Washington, apart from its function of gathering and distributing news from all parts of Canada. By agreement, The Canadian Press receives the com-plete news report of the Associated Press, which blankets the United States and maintains bureaus and correspondents in most of the world's chief cities. It also receives the British Reuter's report.

United Press International maintains a similar news network on this continent and around the world, gathering news and selling it to clients. And each correspondent in a large foreign centre has his "stringers" covering news in smaller com-munities. Thus literally thousands of trained reporters all over the world spend their waking hours digging up information for you.

Dr. Adenauer's remarks would be phoned from the Reichstag pressroom to the agency bureau in Bonn. There they would be sent by teletype to a European news centre at London or Paris, quickly relayed across the Atlantic to New York and placed on the network of teletype circuits that cover this continent.

A teletype impulse travels with the speed of Even with relay handling en route, President Adenauer's words could arrive in local news-rooms within a matter of minutes.

TELETYPE machine is like a large electric A typewriter. Each pressure of a letter key at one end of the line strikes the corresponding letter in each machine on the circuit, and the result is typed on a sheet of paper unwinding from

To speed things up, the words are usually punched on a narrow tape at the sending station as a code of five holes in various combinations. The tape runs through a transmitter which sends

the impulse along the line to receiving machines at a speed of up to 70 words a minute.

The heart of a newsroom is the news desk,

and one of the key men around the "rim" of this semi-circular table is the telegraph or wire editor. He is still called this from the not-so-long-ago days when his news dispatches came to him in the form of telegrams. Today he, or his assistant, merely tears off the typed items as they are tapped out on the teletype machine.

No paper could begin to use all the news it

receives. It is necessary to sort it, select the most interesting stories, edit and cut them if necessary, and add instructions to the printers regarding size of type and position in the paper. Most of the material received - and both of your local newspapers have two fulltime incoming machines—goes into the waste basket. What you read in the paper is your editor's best estimate, based on experience, of what you will wish to read. And remember - he must keep in mind the wishes of thousands of other readers besides yourself.

Wirephoto Machine

WITH the news item selected and edited down to size, either the telegraph editor or another deskman writes a "head" for it. That is the largesize black type that precedes the piece, sums up what the story is about, and sets it off from other items on the page. The news editor will decide if the importance of the dispatch wins it a place on "the front" or inside. Then the "copy is placed in a pneumatic tube and shot down to

He must know what is going on in a score places throughout the world, understand the relative importance of each happening not only to the world but to his own readers, and be able to cut down thousands of words into hundreds without losing the meaning of the event in ques-

and pains? Well, we remember a lucky deer that raced past ... a bear and her two cubs that got away. And the scorched young trees that would have been forest some day. Then we think of the boys on the big yellow bulldozers, ramming through brush and trees and blinding smoke to cut the firebreak along the ridge. That's what finally licked it.

Last of all we think of you. Was it you who dropped the match? You, who tossed the cigarette out of the car window, or left the campfire smoldering? If it was, we wish you'd been here with us to see this forest die.

MIAM? (UPI) - A highlysensitive infra-red camera which can look into the past has been developed by force scientists at Elgin air force base, the Miami Herald reported today.

The newspaper, in a copyrighted dispatch, said the camera was developed as a reconnaissance device. It said by absorbing heat rays emitted by solid objects instead of light rays to record impresns, the camera can, in effect, take pictures of objects which are not there now, but once were.

Elgin officials explained the camera can distinguish in thousands of a degree the heat contrast of objects, according to the dispatch. Heat contrast is what helps to

To Trade or Not to Trade

CHINA EVIDENTLY IS TAKING the Canadian Government's offer of trade seriously. According to The Financial Post, agents of the Peiping Government have been in eastern Canadian cities lately surveying the potential markets for Chinese cotton textiles. The possibility of competition from China has horrified the Canadian textile indus-try. Will it also horrify the Canadian Government? The Chinese are ready to sell us textiles at prices substantially lower than those asked by Canadian, British or American mills. At once we are faced with the old argument that we cannot afford to do business with countries that maintain wage standards lower than ours.

If that be true, we can do business with no nation in the world but the United States, since all others (including Britain) maintain wage standards lower, usually much lower, than ours.

Moreover, if we are not willing to buy the only kind of goods that China can export, how do we expect to sell our goods to China? What becomes of that great drive in the Chinese market promised by the Diefenbaker Government?

Apparently not much is coming of it. A few weeks ago it was indi-cated in Ottawa that a Canadian trade mission would soon go to China, led by a cabinet minister, presumably Mr. Churchill, minister of trade and commerce. Now Mr. Churchill says he has no such plan and maybe the representatives of some other country would be better received than Canadians in China. Is yet another pre-election trade project to be quietly dropped?

It would be quite logical for the Canadian Government to decide that

without buying there. The Government evidently wishes to sell there, since it is properly protesting against the United States Government's ban on exports to China from the subsidiaries of American industries in Canada. By its logic the Canadian Government is bound to admit some goods from China and textiles are among the goods that China can offer us cheaply.

The Government has shown, however, in the case of British woollens that it is determined to protect the Canadian textile industry and in case of Chinese cottons it has a ready means of protection.

Under the new anti-dumping legislation announced in Mr. Fleming's budget the Government can value Chinese textiles, or any other imports, at any price it pleases for customs purposes. In other words, it can raise the tariff and levy a tax by order-in-council without consulting Parliament.

This is a vicious principle constitutionally but it can, and no doubt will be, effective against inconvenient Chinese and other imports. Virtually all imports, of course, are inconvenient to somebody but they benefit the consumer and they are the only means (apart from the borrowing of foreign capital) of paying for our exports.

Now that the Chinese salesmen have appeared in Canada—taking our offers of trade seriously—we shall soon see whether our Governunderstands these facts, whether it really wishes to trade or decision of the minister. To make

LOOSE ENDS

Success in the Long, Slow Climb to the Top Drawer

PROFESSOR LOWER, the great national historian, is about to publish a social history which—according to ad-vance extracts in Maclean's Magazine concludes in general that Canadians are second-rate sort of people. Already the professor has received crushing rejoinder. Some enterprising and patriotic publishers in Toronto are about to publish a Social Register which will prove that some thousands of Canadians at least are truly first rate. In that recorded in Mr. Low-

Hutchison last reached the ultimate point of achieve ment. We have achieved a Society, a true line of Blue Blood, an established and recognizable Aristocracy.

THIS is not an easy thing to do. It has taken us more than three centuries and it is costing a lot of money. According to Maclean's account of the new Social Register, no one, however rich, can buy his way into this catalogue of pedigrees.

Many ambitious Canadians sought to and offered substantial fees for the privilege, but were rejected. They useful citizens but they were not aristocrats.

The real aristocrats were welcomed to the Canadian equivalent of Burke's Peerage but they were required to pay a of $25 for this privilege. A small fee indeed. One marvels at the publishers' modesty.

Surely it should be worth more than $25, it might be worth even $29.50 (as they say in the advertisements of the department stores' weekend sales) to find oneself enshrined in Society. No real aristocrat will quibble about a dollar or two, or even three, in a matter of such

THE aristocrats evidently are not quibbling. Thousands of them have gladly paid the admission price of $25, assurng the publishers of the Register a large profit.

But the profit, we may be sure, is purely coincidental. The real and un-selfish purpose of this publication is to distinguish the first-rate from the swarming second-rate mass of Canadians, to separate the top drawer from the bottom

in short, to establish our aristocracy on a permanent, indisputable and official had money but no pedigree. They might have fumbled the problem of aristocracy

We were getting along quite well in the early days when a few eminent Canadians were granted titles of nobility for great public services in some cases like that of Macdonald and Laurier, and in other cases for great contributions to political campaign funds.

THEN a new generation of radical, sans-cullotic, egalitarian Liberals I sans-cullotic, egalitarian Liberals somehow got hold of the country and abolished titles. This was a great blow to Society, but it began to recover under the Conservative Government of the late Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, who granted a few titles only to find that the Canadian people were not quite ready for They had not yet reached a sufficient stage of social evolution. Consequently, when the Liberals returned in 1935 they lowered the guillotine on our embryonic peerage as other revolutionaries had lowered it in France long ago. The new aristocracy was extinguished in the bloom of its youth.

THAT, as everyone agrees, was a tragic I mistake. At the very moment when Canada's boom had made it the most privileged nation on earth, it could not erect a privileged class. And the effect on political campaign funds was extreme serious.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

But nothing, not even the revolution ary genius of the late William Lyon Mackenzie King, could long suppress Canada's natural and sound yearning for an established aristocracy

Where government failled, private enterprise has rushed into the breech and saved the nation. The true Register and book of pedigrees is about to roll off the press, recording those Canadian families of the unquestionable top drawer who, on the rough frontier a century or two ago, often lacked the more familiar bottom drawers.

I has taken us an unconscionably long time but we now have a legitimate ambition for the young, a shiny mark to shoot at, an adequate reward for a distinguished life. Every Canadian boy or girl can hope to end in the Register and thus separate himself or herself by an impassable gulf from the rude herd of the second-rate. All you need is $25 and the right ancestors.

Any Canadian, even an aristocrat on the old-age pension, can raise $25. you raise a family tree I am not quite Anyway, despite a business reces sion, we are evidently entering a big boom, probably a wild inflation, in ancestors

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG

No Welcome for Neighbors in the Dog Days

IN the lives of even the most resourceful boys there are days when there seems just nothing to do and distracted mothers cudgel their brains for sugges-tions that are usually met with pitying scorn. I suppose that is as true today as it was in the first decade of this great century when I was growing up in Victoria. Such days came in August and they were almost invariably dull, hot and hazy. Grass had turned a crisp, dry brown and it scrunched under our feet and felt bristly to our callussed bare soles. Dust lay heavy on the listless leaves of bushes along

Certainly these were the most diffi-cult days of the year and their sultriness appeared to communicate itself to the receptiveness of youngsters so that fights flamed up on the smallest provo-cation—and died just as fast—as we prowled the neighborhood in search of some sort of diversion, scuffing bare toes in the warm dust and taking idle pot-shots at stray cats with our sling-suses that seemed to be almost perennially empty, or rather seemed to be tenanted for only short periods so that a succession of transient folk who temporarily occupied them left no impact from their presence. If, by some wonderful chance, such a

phases of the moon, although our certainty was without the slightest proof. However, if worst came to worst, the plum tree at the side of the house might have a few ripe egg plums on it.

Well, as we stamped on the porch this was a ritual, the reason for which I have entirely forgotten—a team of heavy draft horses came along with a wagonload of furniture, topped by three youngsters whose popping eyes showed they were utter strangers.

We scurried off the porch just as the driver cut the team around and backed right to the sidewalk across from the front gate.

In a moment we sloughed off the last vestige of boredom and set out to criticize the furniture and to stare at the three little new neighbors so suddenly thrust upon us. If this were a proper story it would tell how we made strangers welcome; how we aided them and proffered our friendship.

We did nothing of the sort. we stared stoney-eyed with curiosity and faint hostility at the hapless newcomers and I must say, except for the youngest of the trio, a little girl of about five, the boys gave us stare for stare.

So we started punching each other around just to show the strangers that we weren't afraid of them and all the time we secretly sized them up to see

So Much for the Sacred Guardians of Tradition

How does the Conservative Government reward its "good and faithsince there are such a limited number of seats in the Senate and MR. FORBES' diatribe (published on this page last Saturday) puts me in world. If you are sufficiently paranoid you can explain this away as a gigantic a difficult position. I know that nothing say will ever convince him, so it seems conspiracy against decency and reason, but there are other explanations which waste of time to direct attention to the gaping holes in his argument. If you place less strain on one's credulity.

Mr. Forbes quotes Degas on Cezanne Let me quote Degas on the Academy, Degas to Sickert, in French: "What would the Academy do if I sent them these? (pointing to some canvases in his studio)." Sickert to Degas, in rich argot: "They'd show you the door."
So much for the sacred guardians of

Tradition, who have made themselves a complete laughing-stock by their antics over the last fifty years.

Why are the works of Picasso and Cezanne, Klee and Rouault, Matisse and Van Gogh bought and praised by men Sir Kenneth Clark and Sir Philip as experts in what Forbes calls "tradi-tional" art? The hidden hand of the international conspiracy again, I suppose

Does Mr. Forbes know that Picasso, to take one of his "incompetent" paint ers, could paint better portraits when he was fourteen than Forbes can now? The evidence is in any public library if you

Aifred Barr's "Picasso: Fifty Years his Art" contains enough specimens of Picasso's "traditional" work to convince the average reasonable man that seem to think that there is no criticism

or self-criticism among contemporary artists. This is utter nonsense. Excellent criticism appears in periodicals like the "The Listener" and others; and it is read carefully by the "superintellectuals" to which Forbes refers. The difference between this criticism and Forbes's delirious attacks is that the former is informed criticism.

The best criticism of Picasso that I know is contained in Michael Ayrton's "Golden Sections"; and the best reply to it is by the same man in the same book. The most searching criticism of contemporary art is to be found in Wyndham Lewis's "The Demon of Progress in the Arts." Both of these books are in every public library; both of these writers are painters as professional as Forbes and a million times as good. Lewis is the outstanding portrait painter and draughtsman of Twentieth century Britain.

I give you these references so that you can make up your own minds. I don't crave authority for my own preferences in art, but if I did I could easily find it in the writings of Bernard Berenson and Kenneth Clark.

When Berenson speaks about Cezanne listen hard, because this man, aged 93, ndoubtedly possesses more skull-furniture on the subject of art than any man He defines his terms; he is aware as Forbes, God help us, is not-that Reality is not just another name for natural appearances; his judgments of odern art are based on an unrivalled firsthand knowledge of the great painting of the last 1,200 years; he does not confuse the price of a painting with its

Mr. Forbes, on the other hand, has spent forty years concentrating on the "How" of painting, without ever once asking himself about the "Why." Now he finds that the trade he has mastered is no longer in great demand, so he takes after the competitors who are driving him and his kind out of business. By implication he accuses the Governor General of being a dupe, and Allan Jarvis of being a fraud.

His utterances are so wild and woolly, so reminiscent of the flat-earthist, the nature-healer, the religious crank and the Baconian, that it is difficult to keep one's patience. But we should be sorry for him. He and his kidney are following the feudal baron, the brontosaurus, and the two-bit shave and haircut on the long journey toward oblivion.

I have not Mr. Forbes's impressive genealogical and professional qualifica-tions, but I was trained first as a lawyer and then as an historian, so I do know a little about evidence. I have taken twenty years to put myself into posses sion of a number of facts about art in general and modern art in particular,

Matched Imports

Hats off to the first annual Vancouver International Festival of the Arts, just completed after four weeks of feverish, successful, and expensive activity. The Festival from the very first, enjoyed a complete absence of timidity on the part of its planners. It was conceived and ex-ecuted on a broad, bold scale; it was as good a thing as ever happened in and to British Columbia, though its

Festival to be on a par with Salzburg and Edinburgh; what a courageous act of faith on their part, therefore, for them to have decided to rely largely on Canadian talent, which their equivalents could have been found among other Canadians who, this year, at least did not take part.

At least two "imports," however, were irreplaceable, and without them the Festival would not have been the same; they were the one and only Bruno Walter, and the sensational Norwegian soprano, Ingrid Bjoner. Two Canadians of world standard who were conspicuously missing were Sir Ernest MacMillan and Zara Nejsova, who would be an ornament to any Festival anywhere.

The prime objective of the Festival, however, was not so much to be a showcase of Canadian talent; rather, it was meant to be a Festival of the Arts on a very high level.

In that, it succeeded signally. Imagination and high intelligence were displayed by the Festival's Artistic and Man-

Industrials in Spotlight During Week at Toronto

By GERRY MARTIN

Canadian Press Staff Writer
Canadian stock movements went up and down like an elevator this week, with industrials taking the longest rides.

The week belonged to industrials, especially at Toronto where their index was the only one to show a gain. They had a 1.33 gain at 469.23. This compares with last week when they gained three points as every section was up.

Market observers didn't have a ready answer for the sudden shifting. It was pointed out the United Nations special meeting on the Middle East was causing the New York market to go cautious pending a decision and the same was likely true here.

Progress, progress, ever progress.

The latest evidence of progress is presented by the B.C. You are no doubt aware of the basic facts behind the

Instead, they will begin with the initials "E V." followed by the digits 2, 3, 4, or 5, as the case may be, which in turn will be followed by the OTHER digits in the present telephone numbers.

This, indeed, is progress.

To dial The Times, you no longer dial two-three-one-three-one. You will dial three-eight-two-three-one-three-one. Instead of only FIVE digits, progress now gives you

One of the great merits of this progressive move is removes the danger of the index finger on the right hand becoming extinct through disuse.

I have already figured out that, on the basis of my normal number of daily telephone calls, the index finger on my right hand will get so much exercise it will be able to one-finger the minute waltz in 30 seconds.

I can only hope that progress will continue, and that the B.C. Telephone Company will not stop at prefixing the initials "E V" before our present telephone numbers.

I look forward to the day when we will be permitted to dial, not the abbreviation for "Evergreen," but the full
